

Informed Consent for Massage Therapy Treatment

Massage therapy is a hands-on manipulation of the muscles, connective tissue, tendons, ligaments and joints of the body. It can be used as a preventative or restorative measure to help maintain, rehabilitate or improve physical function. It also aids in the relief of pain symptoms.

Registered Massage Therapists use a variety of techniques either alone or in combination to provide the most appropriate treatment for you. Treatments typically include Swedish massage, Hydrotherapy, Trigger Point Therapy, Myofascial Techniques, and Deep Tissue massage, Rhythmic Mobilization, Manual Lymphatic Drainage and Remedial Exercise.

Hydrotherapy refers to the use of hot and cold modalities applied to improve circulation and stimulate the healing process and immune system.

Trigger point therapy is the treatment of a hyperirritable spot within soft tissue. Trigger points are point tender and often exhibit a predictable pain referral pattern causing a shortening of the affected muscle.

Myofascial therapy is a technique that affects the connective tissues surrounding muscles and muscle groups as well as organs and other structures.

Deep tissue massage Deep tissue massage is a type of massage aimed at the deeper tissue structures of the muscle and fascia, also called connective tissue. Deep tissue massage uses many of the same movements and techniques as Swedish massage, but the pressure will generally be more intense. It is also a more focused type of massage, as the therapist works to release chronic muscle tension or knots

Rhythmic/Joint mobilization techniques range from non-specific to very specific movements of a joint to increase range of motion. This is not a chiropractic adjustment. This technique takes a joint to the limit of available motion and no further.

Manual lymphatic drainage is a light repetitive technique used to pump lymphatic fluid through the superficial lymphatic capillaries aiding in the relief of swelling and edema.

Remedial exercise uses a combination of active and passive exercises to restore and improve normal musculoskeletal health. These exercises are done in treatment or at home as a Home Care plan.

What to expect in a first visit

Your Massage Therapist will develop a case history, perform orthopedic testing as needed, and will help you to identify risk factors and make recommendations to help you optimize your physical well-being.

Even mild therapies have their complications; some therapies must be used with caution in certain disease or conditions. It is very important, therefore, that you inform your practitioner immediately of any disease or health condition that you suspect or are aware of, or if you are pregnant.

While in treatment you will be respectfully covered. Only the area of the body being treated will be uncovered to allow for the massage. Any risks or possible complications or side effects will be explained to you. Your Massage Therapist will ensure that your treatment is appropriate for your level of comfort and that treatment can be stopped at anytime by your request. If you have any questions feel free to ask your therapist before, during or after your treatment.

Together you and your RMT may develop a long term treatment plan based on your needs and concerns. You have no obligation to undergo every part of the treatment plan and the plan can be changed to better suit your needs at any time. This plan will include setting realistic goals, discussing possible responses to treatment and being informed of alternative health care options.
